HONORS PROGRAM

The Honors Program is open to qualified seniors who wish to conduct advanced study and research in African American Studies. One begins the process by consulting with a faculty adviser. Honor students are expected to participate in the Honors Program during the entire senior year. Students are required to enroll in AAS 495A Honors Research (Directed Reading) in the fall semester senior year and to enroll in AAS 495B Honor Thesis in the spring semester.

Admission: Juniors with a cumulative grade average of 3.50 are eligible for the honors program. In the spring semester interested students should submit a written proposal for their honors project. The project must be approved by the faculty member who has agreed to direct the project.

Honor Program Requirements:

- Enroll in AAS 495A during the fall semester, senior year
- Enroll in AAS 495 B in spring semester and write the honors thesis
- Enroll and complete satisfactorily an upper level undergraduate course (300 or 400 level), or a graduate seminar
- Defend the thesis in an oral examination with the thesis committee
- The committee will consist of the faculty director, a second reader, and a member of the faculty from outside of the African American Studies department
